Marginal Column By JOHN WORRALL

THE defeat of the South African Premier, Dr. Daniel F. Malan, last week in the Colour-coded Vota Bill at his fifth attempt to crash through the constitutional barrier protecting the common roll voting rights of the Coloured people of the Cape Province — leaves another series of question marks. Dr. Malan failed by nine votes to get a two-thirds majority at the 20th conference of both Houses of Parliament in an address to the 20th conference of the General Zionist Party at the Z.O.A. House here.

Meanwhile, Guatemala sent a note to the U.N. Security Council in New York saying that the cease-fire called for by the Council last Sunday had not been observed. Guatemalan delegation sources said that the note did not seek to interfere with the Council, but asked what action it intended to take to see that the cease-fire was adhered to.

A Guatemalan spokesman here stated, "The army said that in the present circumstances its forces were prepared to repel the invaders and it did not seek to call on reserves or to use the services of thousands of civilians who want to join in." The arrangement to secure peace and stability in the Middle East would be welcomed by Israel provided that it satisfied four criteria: existence, freedom, security and development, Mr. Sharett said. Peace can be secured at the price of any of them. National unity in Israel is greater than that of the colonies attained their independence. The Prime Minister cited this opinion of a prominent American visitor now in the country.

The Prime Minister's greeting to the conference in the name of the Government was received with friendly cheers by the large audience which attended the open space in the Z.O.A. House.

In his address, Mr. P. Bernstein, President of the General Zionist Party, also stated that problems of foreign policy and national security are now beginning to overshadow economic problems.

Business as Usual

The spokesman added that business life in Guatemala City was now normal. Shops had opened and work has been resumed in all government offices.

A broadcast from Guatemala which announced that it was Radio Guatemala, today stated that the Norwegian Government cannot agree to Norwegian ships cannot proceed as this would be contrary to international law."

However, it added, the Government will, in accordance with the Security Council Resolution of last Sunday, take all measures aimed at restricting the armed conflict in Guatemala.

Britain had already rejected the U.N. request for permission to inspect British vessels. West Germany announced today that she was asking shipping firms to promise not to carry arms to the U.S. that she would not object to the seizure of British ships.

In Paris, officials said France would "politely" reject the American request.

In Montevideo, the Uruguay Chamber of Deputies passed a resolution of solidarity with Guatemala, saying, "The aggression against Guatemala constitutes a conspiracy against peace in America and a denial of the rights of free peoples to self-determination."

Dealing with economic problems, Mr. Bernstein reassured that stability of prices, raising of the productivity of labour and the freeing of foreign currency were among the paths to national economic health.

The participation of the General Zionists in the Government was not due to narrow party considerations but to the needs of the State as a whole. Our participation was needed for the nation and for our party, he said.

Mr. Bernstein claimed that since the party had entered the Government, the ranks of the General Zionists have grown much stronger.

The question is not whether the General Zionist Party will emerge stronger in the next elections to the Knesset but by how many more seats.

We must put the interests of the community above the interests of the Party, Mr. Bernstein continued. He warned against those who want to make easy political capital out of narrow political considerations.

Private Enterprise

Private enterprise, rather than regimentation and a philanthropic regime and public interests than those of party interests should guide the General Zionist Party in the future as in the past, Mr. Bernstein concluded.

An armed attack was delivered by Mr. Israel Rokach on political controlled labour exchanges, settlement through the agency or media of parties, and against trusts.

He denounced these phenomena as being contrary to the public interest, and demanded that they be controlled by the State.

After surveying the history of the relations between the General Zionists and Mapai since the formation of the coalition at the end of 1953, Mr. Rokach warned that the relations between the two parties cannot be governed mechanically, they must be the meeting of the hearts and minds.

Mr. Rokach praised the General Zionists' contribution to the educational system, the restoration of the health of the national economy as well as their support to all measures designed to increase our military preparedness.

Field Corps Martial

It was not correct that Field Corps Martial were unnecessary in this country, he replied to an argument presented by Dr. Bader, Herut. Field courts would come into operation only in the event of an emergency which isolated a part of the army from its command. In such cases it might be essential for reasons of morale to hold a court martial without a serious crime having been committed. He added that he believed that in some respects the Army code was not sufficiently severe.

As regards the application of the Army code to civilians, he said the security in connection with the manufacture of arms and military research was no less important today than the security of the Army itself, and the military code had to apply to both.

The UN spokesman told The Jerusalem Post that immediately after Saturday's incident, two UN observers left for the Jerusalem Corridor settlement and proceeded with investigation on both sides of the demarcation line. The local commander at Mevot Betar, however, denied access to the observers, and they were not permitted to interrogate witnesses, the spokesman claimed.

A thorough investigation was prompt on the Jordan side, declared the UN spokesman, and the three bodies photographed before being returned to Israel at the Mandelbaum Gate. In the opinion of the observers, the bodies had neither been mutilated nor dragged over the ground; but gun-shots at close range might give the appearance of deliberate disappearance.

Commander Hutchison had written to the Israeli delegate on Sunday, hoping that tension at Mevot Betar had slackened and the local commander would allow examination of witnesses. This did not help the dead man, but it would serve as a warning to others to know that such an enquiry would be held.

He did not think it was undemocratic that, as a general rule, it was not contemplated to have privates as judges. In Haifa, three privates had been killed in a clash with Jordanian forces of life, but today the large majority of privates in the Israel Army were 18-year-olds. He did not think anybody's interests would be served by asking men to serve as judges until they had acquired more knowledge and responsibility.

Security reasons made it imperative to select the panel of lawyers who would be admitted for the defence of soldiers in military trials. It was impossible to make all Army files available to persons known to be hostile to the State.

WATER TALKS

The Israeli-U.S. water talks were concluded yesterday when Prime Minister Sharett met with Mr. E. Johnston, President Eisenhower's Special Envoy. The talks will be continued today.

Sharett States 4 Requisites For Mid-East Peace

WASHINGTON, Tuesday (Reuters). — The Guatemalan Army Command today informed its Embassy in Washington that it had thrown the rebel forces out of the key coastal city of Puerto Barrios and had captured a vessel flying the Honduran flag, seizing the crew and a considerable quantity of arms.

The army had begun a "pincer" movement, a cordon around the rebels, repelling them at several points, it stated.

Meanwhile, Guatemala sent a note to the U.N. Security Council in New York saying that the cease-fire called for by the Council last Sunday had not been observed. ## Press Review:

West's Border Plan Reveals Lack of Desire for Peace

The border plan of the Western powers infringes on Israel's sovereignty, as in the proposals for a free zone between Jordan and the Egyptian-occupied Golan strip and for extending the powers of the U.N. observers but, even worse, it betrays the lack of the fundamental desire for a real peace settlement. "Zmanim" (Progressive) says, and urges that the Government submit constructive proposals of our own in addition to a detailed and concrete answer.

"Hamodia" (Agudat Yisrael) also feels that the plan endangers our political sovereignty, since we have already been dependent on the U.S. for some time from an economic point of view. The plan endorses the Israel's refusal to sit down with the Arabs for peace talks, even within the framework of the Oslo Agreement.

Agudat Yisrael strongly resents the suggestion for free Arab traffic between Hebron and Gaza, which Jordan so far has consistently shirked his obligations to allow us free access to Jewish holy places under her control. The proposals should be regarded as a trial balloon taken by the Communists, as the strongest party, should be given a fair chance to shoulder the responsibility of administration.

"Kol Ha'am" (Communist) published instead of a leading article, resolutions of the party's Polit-Bureau denouncing the anti-Communist outrage in Nazareth. U.S. policy towards Guatemala, and hailing the elevation of Israel-Soviet relations to Embassy level.

Holds Development

"Davar" (Histadrut) asserts that the subsidies return payments proposed by the Ministry of Finance, should not be regarded as a tax but only as a subsidy refunded by those who can pay. The paper stresses that most of the money (some 10 million) will be used to bolster the development budget for the productive employment of jobs workers, and that part of the expected income will be devoted to fostering exports and stabilizing prices.

AT THE CINEMA

ERNEST Hemingway's "The Snows of Kilimanjaro" (Orion) strongly denounces the American proposal, and says that they are only the beginning of a most serious crisis in our relations with the Western powers. We should mobilize all forces at home and in the diaspora for a long, bitter struggle, and first of all put an end to infiltration into Israel, nothing but an electrified barbed-wire, can save border tension.

Serious Crisis

"Al Hamishmar" (Mapam) strongly denounces the American proposal, and says that they are only the beginning of a most serious crisis in our relations with the Western powers.

We should mobilize all forces at home and in the diaspora for a long, bitter struggle, and first of all put an end to infiltration into Israel, nothing but an electrified barbed-wire, can save border tension.

"Hatzofe" (World Mizrahi) feels that the latest proposal, which is calculated to make Israel a "protective" under the control of foreign observers, are only a logical implementation of anti-Israel declarations, which were not met with the necessary resistance by the Government of Israel and the Zionist Organization.

In a second leader, the paper calls on the Government to "reclaim" Israel's lands in Nazareth and the Galilee, which for all practical purposes has been lost to the Communists and other "Levantines" trouble-mongers as a result of Mapai's weak policy towards the Arab minority.

"Hatzofe" (World Mizrahi) feels that the Knesset majority was right not to appoint parliamentary inquiry committee on last week's disturbances in Nazareth. The world only has been exploited by the extreme left-wing, which should not have been so surprised that for once the Communists were those who suffered. The paper doubts the wisdom of having

VISITORS' GALLERY

Mr. Mexico

Travellers who know the lush republic south of the Rio Grande call Mr. Sol Wischnack "Mr. Mexico." Now on his second visit here, Mr. Wischnack says that he has tremendous faith in Israel's economic future "not only as a Jew, but as a businessman."

"During unforeseen circumstances," his native country prompted him to add, His faith has been expressed concretely; he has interests in several enterprises here — including over 150 dunam of citrus.

Mr. Mexico, tall, balding and bespectacled, speaks English and converses fluently with athletic types. When he arrived in Mexico from Siberia some 24 years ago, one of his first acts in the Jewish community was to organize a Maccabi group, and his interest in Jewish communal affairs has not lagged since. Mr. Wischnack is a perceptive controller of Mexican politics, and his Fund campaign, of which 7 per cent has been earmarked for Israel in recent years. He calls the Jewish Community of 20,000 in Mexico City "one of the healthiest of Yishuvim."

The Mexican Jewish leader is a man with a great deal of pride in his organization "Overseas A.A." which began as an automotive service station, has grown to be the largest firm supplying ignition and carburetor parts to Mexico's 380,000 motor vehicles (over 10 times Israel's car and truck population). But his pride is in the technical achievements of his firm.

Mr. Wischnack, this time accompanied by his wife, is leaving the country in two weeks for a tour of Western European and Scandinavian countries. S.A.

Oded Gadna Win Nebenholz Memorial

Oded Gadna, of Tel Aviv, won the Nebenholz Memorial Cup, (donated in memory of a member of Petah Tikva Hapoel who died in the War of Independence) by defeating Petah Tikva Hapoel 3-2 (2-0 half-time) in the finals on Saturday. Ten youth Hapoel soccer sides competed in the event in Petah Tikva.

Maccabi Basketball

Tel Aviv Maccabi "A" won the Maccabi Cup basketball competition, held here on Saturday, as part of the "Maccabi Month" events by winning every game. Kiryat Motzkin was second and Tel Aviv Maccabi "B" third in a five-team contest run on the League system.

Startled with Little

Lord Camrose did not start with nothing behind him, but he did start with very little.

His father, the founder of a prosperous estate agent's business, was an Alderman of Merthyr Tydfil and became Mayor. His father is said to have been a man of remarkably strong character; he had three remarkable sons. All three of them were created peers; to a large extent they worked together as a family in the building of large consolidated enterprises.

The eldest son, the late Lord Buckland, made his career in coal, iron and steel, and cotton. The younger two, William Ewart Berry, who became Lord Camrose, and J. Gomer Berry, later Lord Kemsley, both entered journalism at an early age, and their close association for many years made them be regarded as an indivisible unit in all their operations. They formed an admirable team, with William Berry mainly concerned in the editorial side of the many publications they acquired, and Gomer Berry as the business organiser.

It was Lord Camrose who arrived in London first after spending five years on Merthyr Tydfil and other local papers. When he was only 22, he started the Advertising World on a capital of less than £100. His younger brother joined him within a couple of months. The magazine was a success from the start and after nine years it was sold for £11,000.

Other small but successful publications followed. The first big purchase was the Sunday Times in 1915. Although its circulation was only 20,000 at the time it was considered a definite success for Lord Camrose, who obtained it for £1,000.

In the next 15 years the expansion of the group was very rapid. In rapid succession the carry freight to stations and the introduction of diesel engines were the main factors responsible for the economies.

Stricter controls brought about a decrease in expenditure.

Salaries accounted for 74% fuel and power 12%, other materials eight per cent and miscellaneous six per cent of expenditure.

The Ministry announced that with the completion of the Arlosoroff Station in Tel Aviv a considerable rise in the number of passengers on the Haifa-Tel Aviv line is anticipated.

Camrose—Story of Success

Viscount Camrose, Chairman and Editor-in-Chief of the Daily Telegraph, and Chairman of the Amalgamated Press, who died last week at the age of 76, was for over 25 years Chairman of The Financial Times.

Among the very wide range of his business the work of which Lord Camrose will be most remembered is probably the creation of the modern Daily Telegraph. When he bought it in 1929 the paper was in a weak position; it had a circulation of less than 100,000 and faced heavy competition from The Times and The Morning Post. In 1930 he decided to reorganise the front page.

Partly because of this and even more because of the new personality Lord Camrose gave it, the Daily Telegraph enjoyed after that a long period of expanding sales. After the Second World War it reached the level of 750,000 by the outbreak of war, and it now Viscount Camrose stands at more than 1,000,000.

What can perhaps only be paralleled in the United States. It was to win a mass sale for an avowedly serious newspaper of sober and conventional appearance.

There is no doubt that this achievement is unique, and it was only by parallelism of the possessions of a politically important national daily.

The next purchase was the old-established Morning Post in 1927.

This was merged with the Daily Telegraph. Two years later Lord Camrose was given control of the Daily Telegraph by an amendment of the articles of association, with the right to appoint a lineal descendant to the position on his death.

Owing to the great expansion of the newspaper printing interests of the group a rearrangement of interests took place in 1937. Under it, Lord

Camrose acquired Lord Kemsley's interest in the Daily

Telegraph and sold to his brother the holdings in Allied Newspapers, at the same time acquiring the holdings of Lord Kemsley and Lord Iliffe in the amalgamated Press and The Financial Times.

This adjustment represented the first break of the direct association of Lord Camrose and Lord Kemsley in newspaper control, although they remained in close association in a number of other directions. In 1948, The Financial Times

entered into the hands of its previous proprietors and was merged with The Financial News.

For a short period in 1939

Lord Camrose acted as chief assistant to Lord Macmillan in the reconstruction of the Ministry of Information. In 1941 he was created a Viscount. He married the eldest daughter of the late Thomas Coram, and left four sons and four daughters.

SAFAD PEACE TALKS FAIL

Jerusalem Post Reporter

SAFAD, Tuesday. — Despite 10 hours of negotiations between the Labour Council Secretariat and the Mayor, Mr. Y. Podhorner, the Municipal staff here are continuing their strike, as the demands were nearly in sight when the Mayor raised new proposals. It is understood, whenupon the workers' representatives left the meeting.

The employees had suggested delaying payment of salaries in order to give priority to daily labourers who have been working at low pay for two years.

The strike, which will enter its fourth day tomorrow, will now also include sanitation workers.

Meanwhile, the local employment situation has eased. Following a conference of the Labour Exchange and Histadrut officials with a Labour Department representative at Kiriat Shmona last Thursday, Matz Ha'umma have taken on 25 workers, the Soil Conservation Department of the Ministry of Agriculture another 35, and the After-taxation Department 50.

Preparing to Follow-Up Israel Success in World Fashion Shows

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Israel participation in the international fairs at Izmir, Nicosia, Bari and Salonicci and the "St. Etat Messe" at Stockholm, all to take place in August and September of this year, were organized by the Central Committee of Fairs and Exhibitions in Jerusalem yesterday. This committee is made up of representatives of the Foreign Office, the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, the Manufacturers' Association and the Chamber of Commerce.

Plans for a winter fashion show in Tel Aviv, to be attended by 50 leading American buyers and fashion reporters, were reported on by Dr. E. Justice, director of the Committee and Secretary of the Union of Israel Fashion Industries. Dr. Justice has just returned from three weeks of trade shows in the U.S.

Orders are already in for sweaters and jersey blouses and Bergdorf Goodman and Saks Fifth Avenue will feature MIA brassieres this year, Dr. E. Justice reported.

The American representatives of the 15 local firms who participated in the three fashion shows in Izmir, Bari and Salonicci and the "St. Etat Messe" in Stockholm, have organized by the American Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the Israeli Consulates. Israel industry exhibits are also now on view at the International Fairs in Johannesburg and Brussels.

For the first time, Israel participated in the New York Import Show which was held in May at the 34th St. Armory in New York City. Sixteen countries and 120 exhibitors participated in this show, and Dr. Justice said that Portugal and Israel received the most favourable Press reviews.

THERE can be no denying the depth of feeling aroused in this country by the latest murderous exploit of OPEN SEASON Jordanian forces against ON THE members of BORDERS an Israel frontier settlement and the bestial manner in which it was carried out. It was another instance of that callous technique which the Jordanian forces have evolved of late and are bringing to ever higher degrees of perfection. Guards or settlers in the border zone are shot at from a safe distance across the frontier and when they are overwhelmed they are dragged across, stabbed or clubbed to death, their bodies disfigured; and after every brutal instinct of their captors has been satisfied, the trophy is handed over to the MAC as further proof of Israel's aggressive moves on Jordanian territory.

As early as May of 1952 the body of an Israeli soldier murdered by Jordanian National Guards near Ma'aleh Hahamisha, one kilometre inside Israel territory, was dragged across to present evidence of an Israel attack on Jordan territory. Fire was opened by regular Jordan forces on the MAC investigation team in an attempt to delay its progress and thereby gain time for the removal of the body into Jordan. In its resolution at the time, the MAC expressed its disgust at this contemptible form of deception. A similar manoeuvre was exposed by the MAC in the case of the attempted murder on September 24, 1952, of Major Nutov of the Israel delegation who had been attacked while engaged in marking the Demarcation Line inside Israel territory with the full knowledge of the Jordanian members on that Commission. On May 8 of this year there was another incident of this kind. Two Israeli policemen, wounded when a superior Jordanian force attacked a small Israeli police patrol near Kibbutz Ilin, well within Israel territory, were dragged across the border, murdered and defaced and again had to serve as proof of an Israel invasion of Jordanian territory.

This practice can be continued and extended on a considerable scale, for everywhere along the frontier there are Jewish policemen and settlers guarding fields and orchards who can be sniped at from a safe ambush and then hauled across by superior Jordanian forces. These are of the best of the nation's youth, who carry out the hazardous guard duties assigned to them. They are pitched against a force euphemistically described as "Jordan National Guards," built up from the dregs and jails of the Middle East, financed by all the Arab States in the area and operating under the safe protection of an Arab Army commanded by British officers. The responsibility for this organized campaign of murder rests squarely on the Government of Jordan which while organizing and sending out these gunmen has had the effrontery, after having lodged a complaint against Israel to the Security Council, to run away from its charge when required to accept the obligations of pacific settlement provided in the U.N. Charter.

The outside world takes little note of the steady toll of Jewish life which is being exacted week after week on the borders of Israel. It reacts only when the despair of the settlers driven crazy by this murder campaign vents itself in some act of retaliation. But the people of Israel cannot remain silent in the face of this ever-increasing and brazen provocation. A situation which has got so out of hand cannot be remedied by short-term palliative measures, but only by the full and sincere implementation of the existing armistice which the Jordan authorities have robbed of all real meaning except that of affording them immunity for the pursuit of their guerrilla war against Israel. Israel will not allow itself to be provoked by this murder campaign but must demand that an end is put to the open season on the flower of its manhood.

WHEAT PRICE LYDDA AIRPORT. Tuesday. The price of American and Canadian wheat may decline by about 10% to $1.05 a bushel, it is quoted today by Mr. A. Mancer, head of the Israel Purchasing Mission in the U.S. upon his arrival for a one-month visit.

Turks Discuss Israel's Defence Role With Mohammed Ali

By DAVID BOY

ANKARA, — WOULD you admit a Moslem country into the Turco-Pakistani Alliance?" we asked Mohammed Ali during his visit to Ankara, making it clear that by a Moslem "country" we meant Israel.

"We are not talking in terms of Moslem or non-Moslem countries," he answered. "But some Middle East countries strongly oppose the participation of a certain country in the alliance. This option must be respected in order to ensure the development of the pact."

He spoke Mohammed Ali in Ankara. Not in Damaskus, he seems to have agreed with a different "Turkish and Pakistani," he said, "are Moslem countries and have no intention of inviting Israel to participate in their alliance."

Such considerations are not new in the statements of Pakistani leaders, and it is quite clear now that they will continue their old policy of trying to show to the Turks and the Americans that they longed to think in terms of religion and the Arabs and their own countrymen that they are still the champions of Islam.

But when are the Pakistani leaders really sincere? Turkish officials are, generally, convinced that Mohammed and Mohammed Ali do not believe that Islam can be the basis of a political alliance.

The Turks appreciated this point of view and they will ignore Israel, concentrating all their efforts on Iraq and on Syria. The Lebanon is regarded as having been won over to the idea, and Iran is eager to enter the Pact, provided that the petroleum issue is solved.

But what will happen if Israel asks that she be included in the invitation which the State Department extended to him just as he was due to come to Ankara with the Prime Minister was a clever move on the part of the Americans and contributed to the success of Foreign Affairs. Others argue that she is demanding to participate. She knows that when the time is ripe we will invite her ourselves. In the meantime, the Israeli know that ultimately they will profit from our initiative, designed to bring peace and security to the Middle East.

The Turks feel that by protesting very strongly against unconditional military aid to Iraq and other Arab countries they have helped the Israeli in their overall policy. But on this front we have to expect statements that they do not like from Pakistan's leaders, who have to treat public opinion at home with caution.

The real ideas of Pakistani statesmen of the progressive type, like Mohammed Ali, regarding Israel's eventual participation in the Middle East defence system are encouraging. It is learned here from re-

PAKISTAN'S INTEREST IN PALESTINE

By QUTUB AZIZ

KARACHI (P.N.S.)—

PAKISTAN'S proposal for a World Moslem Conference on governmental level to discuss the question of a Moslem joint policy on it, has met with welcome response in many parts of the Arab world. Pakistan's Foreign Minister, Zafarullah Khan, mooted the proposal for such a conference two months ago, a simultaneous demand of the serious consideration of all the Arab nations.

The Pakistan Foreign Minister's proposal has received strong support from the King of Saudi Arabia, who recently suggested that the Conference be held in Arab Jerusalem. King Hussein of Jordan's leaders have already approved the Pakistan proposal and so have some of the other members of the Arab League. Egypt's attitude has not crystallized yet, although during a brief two-day visit to the body of an Israeli soldier

CAIRO in mid-May, Zafarullah Khan sounded out Egyptian Government leaders on the proposal. However, indications are that Egypt would also fall in line with the other Arab states if the others officially agree to the proposed Palestine Conference.

Various Inter-Islamic organizations working in Pakistan, especially the Motamad Al-Islami, have done much to mobilize public opinion in Pakistan in support of the Arab viewpoint. Israel, a demonstration of public enthusiasm over the issue was given on May 28 when "Palestine Day" was zealously observed in this country in response to a call of the Jordanian Al-Aqsa Islamic leaders. The ex-Mufti of Palestine, Haj Amin el-Husseini, is associated with this non-official Inter-Islamic organization which was founded in Pakistan six years ago and now has branches all over the Moslem world.

After World War II had broken out, the young deputy enlisted in the Air Force and served in the Middle East. After the defeat, he was involved in the "Mashhad" affair arrested in Casablanca and arraigned before the Vichy tribunal of Riom with four other Jewish statesmen, including Leon Blum and Georges Mandel. Sentenced to six years in prison, he succeeded in escaping and in 1942 he made his de-

THE UNION OF ELDERLY

SONGS sponsored its last concert of the season at the Beit Hulotz in Tel Aviv, under the management of Julius Sacha. The pianist E. Rudikov, the dancer Ruth Aris (accompanied by E. Crislitzer), the singers Lotte Kristall, G. Hoch, Yeshoshua Stiel, and the piano and accordion team of Alina Asher and Moshe Moskowitz entertained the audience for more than two hours with N. Eshkol's songs and a variety of ceremonies. It was surprising to see how the songs of Shoshana Damari inspired the audience, which consisted mostly of people from Central Europe.

FRANCO

In Tel Aviv

THE last concert of the Collegium Musicum series on Thursday (at the Beit Hanover Hall) again offered a stimulating programme of old and classic music. It ranged from a violin concerto by Purcell (the fast movements in English music of this time for almost always seem to have been inspired by sport like hunting, rowing, etc.), to such enchanting pieces as Busoni's "Praeludium for Organ," which has two violins and two cellos, and the two solo duets from Mozart's "Così fan tutte," excellently studied and accompanied at the piano by Eytan Lustig and pleasantly sung by Selina Alfarad and Mimi Locker.

The tenor David Halperin rendered another Mozart selection stylized and convincingly. It was Kibbush, referred to as a "little German cantata" in the Koehel catalogue, but described in the concert programme as a "Masonic Cantata," perhaps because of the spirit in which it was received. Be it as it may, the Hebrew text was by Ephraim Dror.

The rest of the programme brought works for three female voices (contralto: Ruth Cooper) by Palestina, Monteverdi and the 16th-century English composer Thomas Keeler and French composer from the same period, Lorand Fenyes and Nathan Mishory played the Purcell sonatas, and both artists assisted by Alice Fenyes — concluded the evening with Bach's D major sonatas for two violins and continuo.

Taste and Virtuosity

BETSY de la Porte's recital

at the Z.O.A. House on Saturday again revealed the superb culture and technique of the South African artist. She offered a programme which could attract only a small audience, but her hearts were rewarded with a performance of a rare beauty and distinction. In the first part, the Debussy songs appeared to me the most pleasant. The second part included a group of Mendelssohn songs, and the South African songs.

Hule Project Saves Water

WHILE discussions are going on about the fate of the Jordan waters, 100m. cubic metres of Hule water will be available by eliminating seepage and evaporation, following the completion of the drainage work undertaken by the Jewish National Fund.

The area reclaimed will make room for 12 to 17 settlements, which will irrigate their land with the abundant spring water in the area. The Jordan will flow in the main channel, now being dug by a giant dredger (above) at the rate of 100 metres a day, and the water used for irrigating arid land further which will eventually be used to fill the Bet Netufa reservoir.

The dredger above weighs 100 tons, and has a 170-hp. motor capable of moving the mud removed from the bottom of the lake a distance of three kilometres. Two other floating monitors are engaged in the drainage project. A "small" dredger is digging the western channel that will carry the water of Nahal Kiyon (the Barak) to the main waters of the Jordan.

A mounted crane, working ahead of the main dredger, uproots the papyrus and dumps it by the side of the waterway, forming a natural fence for the mud which accumulates on each side and makes a well-guarded bank for the future river channel. Of the 100 kilometres of channels to be dug 11 have already been completed.

The channel is 48 metres wide and five metres deep. It will carry the waters of the Jordan as well as of the winter floods,

The channel is 48 metres wide and five metres deep. It will carry the waters of the Jordan as well as of the winter floods, which will eventually be used to fill the Bet Netufa reservoir.

The dredger above weighs 100 tons, and has a 170-hp. motor capable of moving the mud removed from the bottom of the lake a distance of three kilometres. Two other floating monitors are engaged in the drainage project. A "small" dredger is digging the western channel that will carry the water of Nahal Kiyon (the Barak) to the main waters of the Jordan.

A mounted crane, working ahead of the main dredger, uproots the papyrus and dumps it by the side of the waterway, forming a natural fence for the mud which accumulates on each side and makes a well-guarded bank for the future river channel.
